China
Iconic Sights

Vast and varied, China offers a myriad of incredible things to see. From magnificent palaces to awe-inspiring fortifications, postcard-perfect mountains and rivers, futuristic city skylines and beyond, you'll find your journey through this ancient yet modern land truly special and memorable.

The Forbidden City

Not a city and no longer forbidden, this huge 15th-century palace complex – once home to 24 Chinese emperors – is the world's largest and best-preserved collection of wooden structure and absolutely a must-see.

The Great Wall

Built and rebuilt over the course of more than 2,000 years, snaking over 20,000 kilometers across northern China, the Great Wall is a magnificent sight to behold. No wonder it's among the New Seven Wonders of the World.
The Terracotta Warriors

Meet the Terracotta Warriors, the army created to guide China's First Emperor – Qin Shi Huang who united the whole country for the first time in Chinese history. There are over 8,000 life-sized clay soldiers, together with hundreds of horses and chariots. Look closer and you'll find no two are the same.

Giant Pandas

Come eye to eye with these adorable, black-and-white creatures, China's most beloved animals. At the Chengdu Research Base of Giant Panda Breeding, you get the chance to see up close how they eat and play in their natural habitat, such as munching on bamboo, falling clumsily off their perches, or just napping.

Shanghai Skylines from the Bund

The city skylines of Shanghai are some of the most spectacular in the world, and the best view is from the Bund, the city's famous promenade. From here, you can admire towering skyscrapers including the Oriental Pearl Tower, World Financial Center, and Shanghai Tower.
Unique Experiences

When it comes to unique experiences, you’re spoilt for choice. Whether you want to have a relaxing river cruise, cycle among surreal limestone peaks, get close contact with the locals or make your own delicious dishes like the Chinese do, China is your oyster. Here we’ve hand-picked three of the most unique experiences you can expect to have on your China vacation.

Cruise

A river cruise enables you to see China in a different light, at a slower pace. Among many river cruises, Li River and Yangtze River cruises are the most recommended. Expect to marvel at stunning limestone peaks, beautiful villages, and peaceful rice paddies on a Li River cruise, or witness gorgeous gorges, mysterious temples, and the world-famous Three Gorges Dam on a Yangtze River cruise.
Learn

China has plenty of fun, hands-on activities for travelers of various interests. Take part in a cooking class to make mouthwatering Chinese dishes; practice tai chi as the locals do to find your inner Zen; learn to make your own terracotta soldiers in a local workshop; create a painted paper fan yourself in a fan workshop...

Bike

Cycling is a unique way to explore China. The country's diverse, epic landscape and cityscape mean options are plentiful. Xi'an's Ancient City Wall and leafy boulevards of Shanghai's Former French Concession are perfect for a ride into China's past, while the peaceful, picturesque countryside of Yangshuo gives you a relaxed feel on two wheels.
Food is part of the adventure and pleasure. When traveling through China, you can enjoy food of different ingredients, cooking methods, and flavors. In each place you stay, you can dine in the local restaurants for a taste of local delicacies. Below are four of the most representative dishes you may want to try!
Hot Pot in Chengdu

An authentic hot pot is a must-eat while staying in Chengdu, the unofficial culinary capital of China. It's such a unique way of eating: sit around the table with friends and family, pick from a variety of raw meats, vegetables, and seafood, and dip them into a simmering pot of broth. Having a hot pot is about sharing, cooking and enjoying good food together.

Roast Duck in Beijing

Don't miss the roast duck while you're in Beijing. This signature dish, known for its crispy skin and juicy meat, has been around for centuries, enjoyed by emperors, celebrities, politicians, and now ordinary people. It's served with light pancakes, into which you pile slices of duck, and other ingredients such as spring onion, cucumber, and fermented bean sauce.

Xiao Long Bao in Shanghai

This little steamed soup dumpling is far and away the most iconic snack in Shanghai. Everyone who's tried it loves it. The delicate, almost translucent dumpling wrapper is stuffed with hot, savory soup and fragrant minced meat. To enjoy xiao long bao, nibble a little hole first before sucking out the juice.

Dim Sum in Hong Kong

You haven't done Hong Kong if you haven't tried a dim sum meal, a Hong Kong classic. When you order dim sum, you get small bite-sized portions of food served in small plates. You've got it right! Dim sum is meant to be shared so that everyone can taste a bit of everything. Must-eats include har gow (shrimp dumplings), siu mai (pork dumplings), and char siu bao (barbecued pork bun).
Watching a cultural show is a wonderful way to relax after a day's exploration as you can appreciate the essential Chinese arts in an entertaining way. From the kung fu show in Beijing to the acrobatic show in Shanghai, here are just four of the many unique cultural experiences China has to offer.
Kung Fu Show in Beijing

What better way to spend your evening than watching an eye-popping kung fu show. Performed by leading Chinese martial artists, it is a visual feast that tells the legend of a kung fu master through an infusion of traditional martial arts, acrobatics, and modern dance.

Impression Liu Sanjie in Yangshuo, Guilin

Set on the beautiful Li River against the backdrop of stunning limestone peaks, Impression Liu Sanjie is one of China’s most spectacular music & light shows. It is directed by Zhang Yimou, the director behind the opening ceremony of the 2008 Beijing Olympics, and tells the tale of the legendary Liu Sanjie, a fearless folk song singer of the Zhuang people.

Acrobatic Show in Shanghai

Chinese acrobatics has entertained and enthralled the Chinese for thousands of years. A feast for the eyes that combines acrobatics, opera, dance, and martial arts, an acrobatic show is a must-see in Shanghai, home to some of China’s most gifted acrobats.

Sichuan Opera in Chengdu

A kind of traditional Chinese opera, Sichuan Opera has a long history of hundreds of years. Its performers change their masks in the blink of an eye, reflecting the strong emotional shift of the characters, and it also features fire-spitting, puppetry, singing, and dancing. Don't miss this captivating cultural experience in Chengdu.
